Fullerton's Muckenthaler center hit by string of suspected arson fires

Seven fires within a month have caused $25,000 in damage to equipment and facilities around the amphitheater, officials said.

FULLERTON – Investigators are looking for someone who they believe has been intentionally setting fires after a series of blazes caused about $25,000 in damage on the grounds of the Muckenthaler Cultural Center.

The most recent fire appeared to have been set around 4:30 p.m. Monday, Fullerton police Cpl. Tim Kandler said. Damage included a piano and storage container.

Surveillance video captured images of a woman in a pink, short-sleeved shirt and dark pants with a white backpack, Kandler said. Officials are reviewing the video, he said, and the investigation is ongoing.

The fire was the seventh in a month at the center, said Allison Town, director of marketing. The cameras were installed in response to the fires, she said.

Each fire was set in the area of the amphitheater. In addition to the piano storage shed, fires have taken place in garden carts, trash cans and the props and scenery area behind the stage.

The piano destroyed in the most recent fire was originally owned by the Muckenthaler family, Town said, and had recently been refurbished. It was valued at $12,000. Also
